Report on Picnic to Cooch Behar Rajbari

Date: 25/02/2025

Organized by : Deptt. of Education, Manikpur Anchalik College, Manikpur

Introduction

An educational picnic was organized by our department to Cooch Behar Rajbari, a significant historical landmark of West Bengal. The purpose of the trip was to combine recreation with learning and to gain firsthand knowledge of regional history and architecture.

Journey and Arrival

We started our journey early in the morning by bus. The trip was lively and engaging, filled with conversations and group activities. Upon reaching Cooch Behar, we were welcomed by the impressive structure of the Rajbari, which immediately reflected its royal heritage.

Historical and Architectural Significance

The Rajbari, built in the late 19th century, is a fine example of Indo-European architecture. It was the residence of the Koch dynasty rulers and is often compared to European palaces due to its classical design, symmetry, and grandeur. Inside the palace, various galleries display artifacts, photographs, and royal possessions, offering valuable insights into the socio-cultural life of the period.

Activities During the Picnic

After exploring the palace, we assembled in the surrounding gardens for our picnic. The well-maintained lawns provided a perfect setting for relaxation. We shared meals, participated in group games, and engaged in informal discussions. The environment encouraged bonding and interaction among students and teachers.

Educational Value

The visit proved to be highly enriching, as it allowed us to connect theoretical knowledge with practical observation. It enhanced our understanding of local history, heritage conservation, and architectural styles.
